Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 28 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Windy with some rain into Friday, before gradually becoming brighter.

This Evening and Tonight:
Fine at first, however cloud and rain making progress eastwards on brisk winds overnight, with some heavier bursts likely. Becoming drier for a time during the early hours, ahead of further rain spreading from the west around dawn. Staying frost-free. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Friday:
Rather cloudy at first, with some showery rain and coastal gales. While further showery rain is possible, this should become lighter with time as sunny intervals develop and winds ease. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Successive bouts of rain, perhaps preceded by some snow, spreading erratically northwards on both days of the weekend, probably mainly affecting the north and hills. Monday probably colder but fine.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.